

Alex Stevens serves as the Manager of Policy and Communications for the Institute for Energy Research. His work focuses on the relationship between business and government in the energy industry as well as the effect regulations and subsidies have on energy markets.

Alex graduated with a B.S. in Political Science from Central Michigan University and a B.A. in Journalism from Oakland University.

Areas of expertise: Public Choice, Interest Groups, Energy Subsidies, The Jones Act, Grid Resiliency