

Alex Stevens is the Manager of Policy and Communications at the Institute for Energy Research. His research focuses on the relationship between business and government in the energy industry as well as the effects of regulation and subsidies on energy markets. Alex also manages IER's communications and media outreach team. Alex is a graduate of Central Michigan University where he received his B.S. in political science and a graduate of Oakland University where he received his B.A. in journalism.

Areas of expertise: Free market perspective on energy and environmental issues, regulatory issues, energy subsidies, and The Jones Act